

DISCUSSING CULTURE WITH YOUR CHILD

In order for our children to understand what culture means, they need to understand their own culture. It would be fantastic if you could discuss your child's heritage with them. You could talk about:

Where do you live? Are you local to Morley or have you lived elsewhere? What is your wider family background? Do you speak another language, do you have a Yorkshire dialect?

What are your family beliefs and values?

Do you follow a religion, do the children have other family members who do or do not?

What celebrations or traditions happen in your house?

These discussions will help our children to understand their own culture and to respect other people's cultures, so we can all work together in a harmonious environment.
